No longer a man the West can do with
His former university distances itself from Seif al-Islam el-Qaddafi — he had a role in nuclear talks and in Megrahi's release, convicted in the Lockerbie bombing case.

There exists a reality for instability and chaos, and civil society is virtually non-existent.

"Libya is a special case," said a former MI6 officer. "I was in Tripoli, and I can say that what might happen after an uprising in Libya is that it will be a civil war, and it's going to be bloody and it's going to be far worse than Syria."
